One morning John got up very late because he had forgotten to wind up his alarm clock. As he tried to shave quickly, he cut himself. When he got dressed, he got blood all over his clean shirt, so he had to find another one. The only other shirt was clean but needed ironing so he started to iron it. There was a knock at the door, it was the man to read the electricity meter. John showed the man where the meter was. When he returned, he found that the iron had burnt a hole in his shirt, so he had to dress with blood on it. As he was very late, he decided to take a taxi to his office. In another part of the town a man had killed a woman with a knife and seen to escape in a taxi. When John's taxi stopped outside his office, a policeman was standing there. He saw blood on John's shirt and thinking he was the murder, arrested him and took him to the police station. The police new that he was not the man, so they let him go. He arrived to the office at five. The boss looked at him and asked him to go away and find another job.
